MRS. SUYDAM AND NOBLE DISPOSSESSED BY LANDLORD FROM THEIR AFFINITY FLAT

Millionaire's Wife and Plumber's Son
Get a Verbal Notice to Leave the Twelfth Street House at Once.

"WE ARE VERY HAPPY,"
THEY TELL REPORTERS.

District-Attorney Whitman Says He Cannot Interfere With the Couple
Under the Law.

Young Frederick Noble and Mrs. Walter Lisenard Suydam Jr. were notified by D. A. Service, landlord of the Regina Apartments, No. 82 West Twelfth street, to-day that they could not continue to make a public parade of their unconventional relations as tenants and that they would have to begin immediate search for new quarters.

The son of Plumber Noble of Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, and the aristocratic young matron did not appear to be in the least dismayed by this declaration, the runaway wife shrugging her shoulders and murmuring, with a sneer: "Oh, very well," while her boy companion merely smiled and said that he thought they would have no trouble in finding comfortable quarters elsewhere.

The couple supplemented last night of their open announcement last night of their love affair and their utter disregard for what relatives, friends or folk in general might think about it. They received an audience of reporters in the three-room flat they had moved into on the day after the young wife left the beautiful villa of her husband at Blue Point, L. I., vowing her love for young Noble and turning a deaf ear to the entreaties of her father and the protestations of her multi-millionaire father-in-law, Walter Lisenard Suydam.

MRS. SUYDAM RECEIVES REPORTERS IN COZY LITTLE FLAT.
The eloping wife was found reclining in a Morris chair with her head thrown back defiantly and a sneer upon her full lips. She wore a white silk shirt-waist, open at the throat and with sleeves rolled up. Her abundance of golden hair was wound in a high coil upon her head, caught in the back with jeweled combs. Her black broadcloth walking skirt fitted her slim figure like a sheath, and she wore black silk stockings and black suede slippers. While not of either the Grecian or Roman type of beauty, her transparent skin and high color gave a touch of healthy comeliness that the most critical could not deny. She held her careless, indifferent pose throughout the interview, and the sneering smile never left her lips. Young Noble was just as nonchalant and answered all questions without the slightest trace of nervousness.

The apartment consists of three rooms—sitting-room, bedroom and kitchen—and throughout the interview the bedroom door remained open, revealing the one big brass bed and the mahogany bureau, on which was spread an abundance of silver and gold toilet articles.

"We are sorry to bother you," began one of the interviewers, whereat Mrs. Suydam caught him up shortly with: "I don't think you are a bit sorry."

"Nor I," chimed in young Noble. "We couldn't be hunted here if bloodhounds were on our trail."

NOT MAKING ANY SECRET OF THEIR LOVE, SHE SAYS.

"And we have nothing to conceal. We are not making any secret of our love," Mrs. Suydam said, with a passionate gesture. "My people know it, my husband knows it, my husband's parents know it. Why should it be anybody else's business? I made no secret of it before I went away. I told them all about it, and they knew that when I set up my mind to do a thing they let me alone."

"I have had any conference with them," she was asked.

"No, not in young Noble, but I have conferred with several of my friends, upon whom I can depend in case of trouble."

"Do you fear any personal action on the part of Mr. Suydam?" was asked.

"Mrs. Suydam has said," replied:

GABY IS HERE WITH KING'S GEMS AND PINK RECORD

But Mlle. Deslys Says She'll Win Success on Real Stage Talent.

$320,000 IN JEWELS.

Actress Gracefully Dodges All
Reference to King Manuel's Infatuation.

Gaby Deslys, who is credited by common report with having overthrown the Kingdom of Portugal by infatuating King Manuel and enticing from him what was left in the royal treasury, reached New York to-day on La Lorraine of the French line, to fill professional engagements at a salary said to aggregate $4,500 a week. She brought a mountain of trunks and a staggering array of pearls. One of her entourage, when asked the value of her jewelry, remarked in a casual way: "Oh, put it at $320,000."

The actress was met at the pier by a private detective who is under orders to keep her and her jewels in sight during her stay in the United States. He said he would employ four assistants on the job.

Mlle. Deslys is a pretty, blond, business-like young woman. By her demureness, her daintiness and her evident desire to avoid notice she became popular with her fellow passengers on La Lorraine, who had expected to meet quite a different sort of person.

Questions about King Manuel, late sovereign of Portugal, were not answered by Mlle. Deslys. She announced on landing that reference to her royal admirer were most distasteful.

"I came here," she said, "as an artist to entertain the public. My private life is my own."

"I have been successful as a singer, a dancer and a player in London, Paris and Berlin. I hope to be as successful in New York."

This was the extent of the conversation of Mlle. Gaby Deslys. She was accompanied by her manager, Gaetano Amadei, and two members of her company, Rene Vermandelles, a singer, and Josephine, a dancer. American performers will be employed to fill out her company in the presentation of two sketches, "Chichine," and "A Les Caprices de Suseite."

Mlle. Deslys carries an extensive wardrobe. She has sixty gowns, with slippers, and sixty pairs of stockings to match. None of this apparel has been worn. The young woman admits that she expects to create a sensation with her gowns and jewels as well as the exhibition of her talents as a performer.

Foreign actresses have reached New York preceded by such widespread publicity. Cleo Demerode came ushered in by notoriety of the same sort, but she was merely the friend of a King, Leopold of Belgium. Gaby Deslys, however, has the distinction of having so fascinated the King of Portugal that he lavished the wealth of the slim treasury of his country upon her until his people rose in revolt, threw him off the throne, exiled his family and set up a Republic.

Up to two years ago Gaby Deslys was little known outside of Paris and not very well known there. She appeared in small theatres on the Boulevard and was thrifty in the way of her kind. In fetes and carnivals she was conspicuous by reason of her display of jewels and flowers.

The young woman got her name from the intimate relations that exist between the Paris public and its theatrical entertainers. When she began to attract attention it was noted that her favorite flowers were lilies. Some one called her "Gaby des Lillies," which is English for Gaby Deslys.

It was while she was playing in a London music hall in a particularly daring sketch that Gaby Deslys was first seen by the King of Portugal. Manuel, on a visit to King Edward, attended a performance. At the close of the act of Gaby Deslys he attracted the attention of the whole house by the vehemence of his applause.

PRESS AGENT ARRANGED A MEETING WITH KING.

Some there are who say that Gaby Deslys's press agent seized upon the opportunity and arranged a meeting between King Manuel and the actress.

These persons aver that the meeting took place and that Manuel never saw the girl again off the stage. But Gaby Deslys soon after the first meeting in London appeared in Lisbon and made the populace sit up and take notice.

Actress Who Arrived With King's Gems

Gaby Deslys, who is to sing and dance and act in New York, is said to have infatuated King Manuel of Portugal and indirectly caused his deposition.

Her salary is the largest ever paid a performer in vaudeville.

She has the most elaborate wardrobe ever brought to this country, and her jewels are said to be worth $320,000.

"MEL" SHEPPARD WINS "880" TITLE AT CELTIC PARK

Irish-Americans Start Early Rolling Up Points in "Met" Championships.

CELTEC PARK, Sept. 16.—The senior championships of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. were held here this afternoon, and as it was another of those famous athletic fights between the New York A. C. and the Irish-American A. C., a large crowd turned out to witness the games. The sun, which came out at the eleventh hour, made the day an ideal one for outdoor sport. The track was in good shape notwithstanding the heavy rain during the night, but the chances for new records were rather slim.

Harry Gilling, who was looked upon to force Sheppard to new world's record, did not start in the half-mile run. He selected the one-quarter instead. The absence of James E. Sullivan was deeply felt. It was the first championship he missed in thirty-three years. F. W. Rubin, Vice-President of the Association acted in the capacity of referee.

POLICE TRAILING ROBBERS WHO GOT BANK'S $258,000.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Sept. 16.—It is the theory of the police of Vancouver and New Westminster that the five robbers who stole $258,000 from the New Westminster branch of the Bank of Montreal are in hiding in Vancouver, waiting for a chance to get away. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars of paper money stolen in New York and the bills of the Bank of Montreal and the numbers of every bill stolen is posted in every bank in Canada and on the American border. The $258,000 in gold and the $5,000 in bills of various Canadian and United States banks are available for use by the robbers, however. The explosives, it has been found, were set off by electricity. Despite the fact that five or six charges were necessary, residents adjoining the bank did not hear the sound.

SPOILED CANDY, GIVEN FREE, MAKES LITTLE ONES ILL

One Victim Said to Be Dying of Ptomaine After Clean-
Out of Factory.

Department of Health inspectors made a house-to-house canvass in Williamsburg to-day to ascertain how many children were made ill from eating stale candy which was passed out indiscriminately by a man who cleaned out the basement of Herman Hill's confectionery store at No. 143 Broadway.

The matter was reported by Mrs. Anna Greenhagen of No. 56 Woodbine street, who returned from a shopping trip last evening to find her six children lying on the floor, very ill. The youngest, Amelia, two years old, was in convulsions, and is now supposed to be dying. The others were brought around after three hours' hard work by Dr. J. B. Rankin.

Mrs. Greenhagen was out at a loss to explain her children's illness, and in her excitement ate pieces of candy which she found on a table in the front room. In a few minutes she became ill, but was quickly revived.

The oldest boy told her that a man whom he did not know had given him thirteen one-pound boxes of chocolates, with which he and his brothers and sisters had gorged themselves. Other children in the neighborhood, he said, had received candy.

The inspectors said that the candy was old and spoiled and that the children's illness had undoubtedly been caused by ptomaine poisoning. Mrs. Greenhagen appeared before Magistrate Kemper in the Gates Avenue Court to-day and asked for a warrant for Mr. Hill's arrest, but the Magistrate told her there was nothing to show he had given the candy away.

Mr. Hill said he told a man to clean out the basement and to dispose of the old candy.

He came to New York from Tarnobesek, Austria, five years ago as a clerk the banking firm of which his uncle, M. W. Hauser, is a member. He quickly became a valued employee and was promoted rapidly. Two years ago he brought his parents from Austria to live with him in the Bronx, and later at Jamaica. At the bank he was considered a model young man, and his death came as a great shock to his employers. He was twenty-five years old and unmarried.

AVIATORS IN CLOSE RACE OVER BROOKLYN ROOFS.

Graham-White Beats Dr. Waldron in Dash From Mineola to Brighton.

There was a hair-splitting aeroplane race this afternoon between Claude Graham-White and Dr. H. W. Waldron, from Mineola to the Brighton Beach race track. Thousands witnessed the flight.

The distance, estimated at eighteen miles, was covered in a little less than twenty minutes. Graham-White leading by a narrow margin when the aeroplane landed at Brighton shortly after 3 o'clock.

The two aviators immediately began many diving stunts after the race track. They were followed later in the afternoon by flights by Atwood, Hebble and Reynolds.

APAWAMIS LINKS, RYE, Sept. 15.—Harold Hilton, champion of Great Britain, won the national championship match this afternoon in the greatest golf match ever witnessed in this or any other country, beating young Fred Herreshoff one hole in a thirty-seven hole match. They were all square at the thirty-sixth hole, after Herreshoff had made a magnificent recovery. Hilton won the thirty-seventh hole after Herreshoff had missed a three-foot put.

50 strokes from the start instead of a 6, which would make him 75.

In the second round of the match this afternoon Herreshoff gave the greatest exhibition of plucky uphill golf ever seen on the links of the United States. Beginning four down even the most optimistic conceded the match to the British champion. Hilton's superb steadiness has always been his greatest asset, and the manner in which he disposed of such a clever player as Jerome Travers proved to those who watched his game that his nerve was superior in almost any contingency.

He continued to show his superiority until he was 6 up on Herreshoff in the early stages of the second round. Then, however, the American defender began to take some of his tricks out of the bag and play the Englishman to a standstill. The gallery went fairly mad with enthusiasm after the turn of the second round.

Hole by hole Herreshoff gradually picked up and finally stood all square with his opponent, with only two more holes to go. Hilton had appeared to go to pieces at the turn of the second round, slicing his drives, flubbing with his iron and overplaying or underplaying his putts. The tumult in the gallery manifestly got on his nerves.

Hilton with a morning lead of 4 up, began the second round after luncheon with the idea of widening the gap over his opponent. Putting more force to his drives, the Englishman increased his lead to 5 up at the fifth hole going out. Subsequently the English crack played conservatively as if he appeared satisfied to hold Herreshoff safe.

Not less than 2,500 persons were on hand for the start of the final round. The crowd kept increasing every minute and was doubled for the second round.

The weather was a continuation of yesterday, except that it did not actually rain, despite the mist in the air. The greens were almost as heavy and the other external conditions such as to decidedly improve the British champion's chances against Herreshoff. So great a crowd tramping over the turf left innumerable heel prints and worked general havoc, since it was next to impossible to control the throng.

The odds against the former metropolitan champion steadily rose, for there was a feeling that he could not hold his putting groove of the past two days against Oswald Kirkby and Chas. Evans Jr.

Hilton said yesterday that he expected to be out-driven by Herreshoff, but intended to catch him at the cups. As a matter of fact, Herreshoff's approaching yesterday was even better than his putting, and if he can continue to lay up his ball anything like as deadily he will give Hilton a close squeak.

Hilton had great advantage in getting the easy end of the draw, which opened a primrose path for him, except for Jerome Travers, while the stars in the lower half have been pelting each other unmercifully. For that reason, if not other, the old guard believes that while he may hold Hilton down on the first round, Herreshoff must weaken in the afternoon.

Two rounds of the three and one-half mile course stretched before them, and

POLICE SEEK MISSING BOY.

The police have been asked by the mother of Albert J. Travis to find her son for her. He lived at No. 73 Quincy street, Brooklyn, until last Monday, when he disappeared.

He is of medium height, stout, and has light brown hair, brown eyes, light complexion, and when last seen wore a gray suit, derby hat, lavender tie and striped shirt. He has a watch and chain and a small sum of money. Any information regarding him will be a great relief to his mother.
